Debate on the Constitutional Amendment.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, DECEMBER 8, 1865.

Phonographically Reported for the OREGONIAN, by J. A. WATKINS.

Mr. Gillette, of Clatsop.

Mr. Speaker, I don't propose to make you a long, eloquent speech; but wish merely to state a few of the plain simple facts which influence my vote upon this question. I am surprised to see this debate taking such a wide range. I thought this subject had been thoroughly discussed long ago, and am astonished to see one gentleman try to distinguish himself by advocating and justifying the system of African slavery which has cursed our country for ages past. The gentleman from Josephine almost went into spasms about the social equality which he thinks is about to be established between himself and the negroes. [Laughter.] I am sorry to see any honorable member of this body so distrustful of his own dignity and ability, as to fear that he will not be considered as good as a negro, and I promise him that I will do all I can to protect him and his party from demoralization, and I assure him that for that purpose I will at some subsequent day of this session, introduce a bill declaring that every Democrat in this State shall be considered as good as a negro so long as he behaves himself. [Laughter.] I believe I will be doing right, for I really think they are as good as any negro so long as they do right, and I am anxious that others should think so.

Mr. Speaker, My first reason for voting in favor of this resolution to ratify the amendment to the Constitution, so as to abolish slavery, is, that as a nation, we have declared all men to be free and equal, and my second reason is, that in the preamble to our Constitution, we have declared that the object of our Government is to secure justice, the blessings of liberty, etc. Our fathers held it to be an inalienable right, vested in every man by his Creator, to enjoy the "pursuit of happiness." It is to maintain consistency in the practice of our nation, to guard and promote the highest interests of humanity and, to carry out the noble designs of our fathers, that I give my voice and my vote in favor of this great measure.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I propose to draw a parallel between the slave and free States, and then exhibit a comparison of them in a progressive, pecuniary, intellectual and moral review. The Southern States embrace a Territory about one-fourth greater in extent, with a still more productive and a climate more salubrious and genial than that of the Northern States. They have a greater number of navigable rivers, a far greater extent of sea coast, with more and better harbors; in short, their natural advantages are superior in every respect to those of the Northern States. I wish to illustrate the progress of freedom and slavery, by exhibiting the most authentic statistics of the country—the census of the United States—and most of those I shall read were compiled by J. D. DeBow, the Chief of the Bureau of Statistics, who was himself a Southern man.

Total wealth (including slaves in slave States) in 1860	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

I have not time, Mr. Speaker, to exhibit all the statistics that I desired to, on this occasion, but here are enough to prove beyond the power of human wisdom to confute, that slavery is, and has ever been, a damnable curse to the States wherein it exists. Here we see the free States, with one-fourth less territory, a less fertile soil and a far more rigorous climate, outstripping the slave States in population, wealth, intelligence, commerce, inventions and every branch of human industry, progress and improvement; while the slave States are lagging behind, dwarfed, degraded and retarded by the withering … of slavery. About one-half of the wealth of the slave States in 1850, consisted in slaves, which deducted from their total wealth makes such wealth equal only to one-fourth of that of the free States. In a pecuniary point of view alone, then, slavery has proven to be a most dangerous, ruinous wrong, and, and, consequently, from every true friend of his country it is justly demanded that he leave nothing undone to right this impious wrong. [Applause.]

The difference in point of education is equally as great as that of wealth. In the State of Connecticut there is but one in every five hundred and sixty-eight native adults who cannot read and write. In the most enlightened slave State, which is Louisiana, there is not quite one white native adult to every thirty eight who can read and write. In North Carolina is but one in every seven! In South Carolina, there is but one in every seventeen; and I presume my eloquent friend from Jackson (Mr. Fay), who appears to have a lasting reverence for this institution of slavery, happened by a kindly freak of fortune to be one of that number. He had but one chance in seventeen, and was certainly a very lucky man. Now, why is this vast difference between the different sections of our country? The average assessed value of land in the State of New York, where the soil is greatly wanting in fertility, is thirty-six dollars per acre, while that of North Carolina, where the climate is much more congenial, is only worth three dollars and six cents. Now, sir, to what shall we attribute this extraordinary difference? Why, sir, there are ten times as many fools in the Southern States as in the Northern; and I am sure it cannot be doubted that it is all owing to their damnable stain of human slavery, which has been spreading itself over the country, and which in a few years more would have the entire wealth of the Southern States in the hands of a few men. The slaveholders had already deliberately laid their plans for the creation of a hereditary aristocracy, and with the determination of a cold-blooded assassin they were rapidly accomplishing their hellish designs. They educated their own sons and daughters but discouraged the poor whites, and strove to keep them in ignorance, or what was infinitely worse, to make them subservient to their own security by means of a false, pernicious education. I say there is incontrovertable evidence that such was their scheme and that they were advancing as fast as possible to a realization of their Satanic hopes. These are facts which can be learned by every one who will take the trouble to investigate. There are books of statistics which are just as startling as those I have given. Yet, because they happen to be of the fortunate number who have learned to read and write, there are men even in our midst who will advocate an institution which they must know has been heaping damnation upon their own race. These statistics which I have given here to-night, go to show that the morals of the South were equally as deficient as their education has been shown to be. Therefore, with these facts before us we cannot doubt that, were the negro more than a stick or stone—of no consequence whatever as a human being—it is still an imperative duty which we owe to our own race to do away with an institution which has caused so much corruption, misery and moral degradation. [Applause.]

From my own personal experience I know that this institution brutalizes our people and makes them natural tyrants. I was born and reared on the Southern border of Ohio, and had relatives living over on the Virginia side of the river. I have known all my life that land on that side was only worth half as much as it was in Ohio. As I said before, I had relatives living on the Virginia side. I have often visited them and they me. I went to school with children whose fathers were slaveholders, and I have often had to lick them in order to get my rights. Yes, sir, I have had to lick my own cousins in order to keep them from tyranizing over me. They had been taught to make the little niggers obey them, and could kick and cuff the slaves about as they pleased. This very naturally made them little tyrants and they grow up to be great ones. I say, sir, this institution brutalizes our own people. I have known instances in those States where helpless negroes have been murdered by their masters and overseers. I have spent much time in those States and have seen much of the institution. That has never been a free country. Freedom of speech has been debarred throughout the Slave States. Why? Because it was dangerous to this institution. No man could go there and speak against this system of human bondage. They claim to be the most liberal and hospitable people in the world, and yet, while they could come north and talk as they pleased, they denied the same natural right to those who went among them. They claim to be a liberal people while they live from the toils of the most degraded slavery! They claim to be the most generous of nature's noblemen, yet they subject the helpless slave to the most excruciating tortures often resulting in death! They boast of their chivalry, yet, if a northern man chanced to stray among them, he dared not exercise the freedom of speech. No, sir, this boasted chivalry has not, for thirty years tolerated the freedom of speech among them! Hundreds of defenseless men, free Americans!—have been mobbed tarred and feathered and even murdered by this chivalry, for simply expressing their opinions that slavery was wrong! Chivalry! Thank God it has at last sunk into a degradation in our land, so low that the fiends of hell might be ashamed to own it. [Applause.]

The gentleman from Josephine has said he supposed there were some gentlemen here who have noble and generous hearts, and he appeals to them in behalf of this system of bondage. Can there be a greater inconsistency than this? Has he forgotten the rebellion that has so lately drenched our beloved country in tears and blood? Are we so soon recovered from our wounds? Have the names of Fort Pillow, Libby Prison, Belle Isle and Andersonville, with the unmeasureable human misery which they recall, been already blotted from our memory? Yet, Mr. Speaker, there are genuine souls here, who will this day, in the purest spirit of patriotism, correct the darkest error of the age. Our nation has just completed her education on the slavery question. This last lesson—the great rebellion—has so completely enlightened her, that she is now determined to abolish that which has cost her untold millions of money, and over 400,000 of her bravest sons. There are but few, perhaps, on this floor who do not now mourn the loss of friends or relatives who have fallen in the struggle for liberty and the Union. My only b… fell in this … strife for nationality and freedom, and here, this night, by my vote, will I help to finish what he with his sword fought to accomplish—the abolition of slavery and the establishment of universal freedom in free America. [Prolonged applause.]

"ENOCH ARDEN IN GEORGIA."—Under this heading the Augusta (Ga.) Intelligencer tells the following story of the war:

We heard a second "Enoch Arden" recite the story of his wrongs yesterday at the Depot, and the perfect nonchalance of his manner rather amused us. He appeared entirely content to "let her went," while he should seek new fields of conquest and form other matrimonial alliances. He had been in the Confederate army for four long years, and has not received a furlough to visit the partner of his joys and sorrows. At the battle of the Wilderness he was wounded and sent to the hospital at Charlottesville, where he lay sick for months. Recovering from his wound, he was ordered to rejoin his command, which he found in the trenches at Petersburg. At the time of the evacuation, and while the lines were being withdrawn, he was again wounded and left upon the field. His wound was of a serious character, and he has not been able to reach Georgia until now. In the meantime, and while all this was transpiring, he had been reported as "among the things that were," to the partner of his bosom. His long absence and protracted silence was proof to her mind that there was … proof … Grief had pressed heavily upon her young life was enshrouded in gloom … like a character in "Jane Shore,"

"She never saw the sun … her …"

Her lost was … and her condition … late, indeed, unless the … and … are to lean upon. That are she found, and leaned upon it. To make a long story short, she was wooed and won a second time in the … her liege lord had "gone up." Our hero … He reaches the vicinity of his home! The startling announcements made to him by some sympathizing friend who is solicitous for the … of society, and begs him not to perpetrate any species of desperation. He pauses, and, like Enoch Arden, concludes to take a sensible view of the matter, but realizes

"How bitter a thing it is to look Into happiness through another man's eyes!"

He learns that she is prosperous and contented—that there is an additional pair of little red shoes in the family, and things generally so "fixed up," that he concludes to spare his former spouse the inextricable confusion his specter-like presence would cause in her now happy domestic circle. He turns his face upon her home forever! (The home, however, we may remark, par parenthese, don't belong to him) but to the "other man!" "The thing that sticks in my craw gentlemen," remarked our hero, with emphasis, "is her a-marrying a durned conscript; if he'd been a man and fout for his country as I have done, I shouldn't a keered. He was a lyin' up in the mountains when I was doin' my duty, the infernal cuss, and that's what I don't like him for—durn him!" And there was some little anger—unlike Enoch Arden—depicted in his grim, war-worn visage, "But I'm all right, gentlemen—he's welcome to her! I'm a goin' into Mexico with Kirby Smith; d—d if I'm a-goin' to take any oath—they ain't got me subjugated!"

The group assembled around this Northeast Georgian, was much amused. True manhood and a character in which there was much magnanimity was written upon every lineament of his face. He has our sympathies, and we believe he made friends of all who listened to his recital. He was a member of the —— Georgia Regiment, and went from D—— county.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE

THURSDAY MORNING DEC. 21, 1865

The Proposed Amendment

Mention is made in the Eastern dispatches of to-day of the introduction of a bill in Congress providing for an amendment of the Constitution so as to cause the President and Vice President to be chosen directly by the people to define the qualifications of voters for these officers and for members of the National House of Representatives and to give Congress the power of regulating these elections and of providing laws for the registration of the names of those who may be entitled to vote under the proposed system

It is probable that the whole scope of the proposed amendment is not indicated by the meagre report we have received A very important, and even necessary addition to the amendment detailed above, could be provided for by changing the basis of Congressional representation so that the apportionment in each State for members of the lower House of Congress may be fixed to correspond with the actual number of voters which a State contains. In other words, the just way would be to provide that each State shall have representatives in proportion to the number of its political people only, and that in making an enumeration of the people for the purpose of deciding how many Congressmen each State shall be entitled to have, these persons only, shall be included, who are given the right of suffrage

The proposition that the President and Vice President shall be chosen by a direct popular vote, has many arguments in its favor The chief of these is that the will of the people can be more nearly ascertained in this manner than by the present method. Under the present system it is possible for a President to be chosen by a small minority of the whole people Suppose several of the great States, having a majority of the whole number of electoral votes, should be carried by small majorities for one candidate, and that all the other States should give a nearly unanimous popular vote for an opponent. In such a case the successful candidate, though receiving a majority of electoral votes, would have no more than a third or a fourth part of the votes of the people A bare majority in New York would secure him thirty-three votes in the electoral college, while a majority of one hundred thousand for an opponent in Massachusetts or Missouri would be thrown away. By adopting the amendment now proposed, the people of the whole country, or a majority of them, may have their expressed will respected; whereas now, it is liable to be defeated by a comparatively inconsiderable number of their fellow citizens.

It seems very probable that the present Congress will propose to the States for their action, an amendment embodying substantially the principle contained in Mr. Jenckes' bill. There is a strong desire throughout the country to have some changes made in this part of our fundamental law. The problem now is to decide what the precise extent of the proposed change shall be. Whether the States shall see fit to ratify this kind of an amendment or not, it will do no harm to submit it to them for their action.

A CONVERSION.—The Statesman of the 18th says:

"We published and endorsed President Johnson's views last Monday."

So then, the Statesman finding retractation necessary, changes its opinions and takes occasion to unsay all it said a few weeks ago. Several days since we predicted it would do this. Up to "last Monday," it held to its old opinions, but now, finding them no longer tenable, it retracts without reservation or conditions. Instead of squarely opposing negro suffrage on principle or instinct, as it did a short time ago, it backs down and takes the position held by President Johnson and Senator Williams. We feel encouraged. We were confident all the while that we would drive it from its Copperhead platform. So remarkable, however, is its aptness to learn, that we confess we are not a little astonished to observe with what nimbleness it can shift positions. If the Statesman is distinguished for one thing more than another, it is for the implicitness of its trust in the infallibility of its political guides. But at all events, we are glad that it has concluded to follow President Johnson. True, its conversion is quite recent, happening, as it tells us only "last Monday;" but who does not know that the hot enthusiasm of a proselyte far surpasses the quiet earnestness of the old disciple who for years has been schooled in the cause which is nearest his heart?

MORE EVIDENCES.—Until yesterday, we hadn't seen the Statesman for two weeks. When the two missing numbers came to hand we found that that paper had changed its politics, and that instead of continuing its "serial" for the purpose of showing that the enfranchisement of the blacks is "a thing which both God and nature forbid," it was giving its readers selections with from various sources in order to show the propriety of gradually introducing negro suffrage in accordance with the plan of President Johnson, We observe, too, that the Statesman has left off calling the OREGONIAN "the negro suffrage organ." What is the reason? It would be interesting to have the Statesman explain the true cause of this omission Were the whole truth stated about the matter, it would read something like this The Union party did not break into fragments as the Statesman supposed it would; hence the "new national organization" composed of "conservatives." Copperheads and reconstructed rebels, fell to pieces at the end of one campaign, and the Statesman finding itself advocating doctrines in direct opposition to the Administration and all loyal men, faced about and became a "negro suffrage organ," taking, or pretending to take the same ground which it bitterly denounced us for occupying a short time ago We shall hear no more from the Statesman in denunciation of the OREGONIAN as a "negro suffrage organ" That Copperhead argument will not be repeated That dreadful weapon has been wrested from the hand of its flippant editor Truly it is impossible to close one's eyes against the thick coming evidences of the Statesman's conversion—an event, which as it tells us, happened "last Monday"

THE MAILS —We are unable to understand why it takes three days to get letters here from Salem Letters which were put in the Salem Post Office on Thursday have not reached Portland yet This remissness on the part of somebody deprives us of our Legislative report which should have come to-day We should be gratified to know how this state of things can be remedied

A letter from Hon Samuel Colt of Baker county, informs us that it was his purpose to have returned to Oregon in time to have been in his place during the late special session of the Legislature, but that the dangerous illness of his father prevented his return from the East as early as he contemplated He expects to reach here in a few months from this time

A Kentucky paper insists that a large majority of the people of the South have always been opposed to secession We suppose then, it was the Unionists who rebelled against the Government, and tried to divide the country

The Legislature adjourned on Tuesday at noon Whenever the Postmaster at Salem thinks fit to forward the mail to this place we shall publish a synopsis of the business transacted during the Special Session

Trade in New York.

NEW YORK Dec 18 —Trade is moderately active. The rise in gold to 148 and the better tone of European advices have occasioned more buoyancy and firmness in commercial circles Cotton and petroleum are affected Wheat is higher, closing at $2 40 for choice winter—$1 64 for common Pork dull and heavy for mess at 29 cents cash Beef quiet at 17 cents for extra mess Groceries are firmer Whisky lower Sterling exchange dull at 109½ for bankers Quite an active speculation is going on in gunny cloth, which closed yesterday at 19 cents Wool and hides are dull and without change in prices There is very little doing in California products Freights to San Francisco are improving Engagements are coming forward freely Freights have advanced to one and a half cents per pound

A letter from Charleston to the Tribune says: The Legislature of South Carolina is largely interested in inducing immigration from Europe to South Carolina It is thought a large number of Germans can be induced to settle in the State, and eventually take the place of the negroes

Bishop Hopkins, of Vermont is now taking a tour through the Southern States, delivering lectures for such charitable objects as the people of the locality where he speaks, may designate The Bishop has been a rebel sympathizer during the war, and the wish is generally expressed that he may abide there among his friends.

The cattle plague has been increasing in England during the past month to an alarming extent During that period the attacks have risen, from previous monthly estimates, from 14 000 deaths to 21,000 Between the 4th and 11th of November, the number increased fifty per cent The Times assumes that the deaths instead of 700 a week are at least four times that number, and if the winter does not bring a change, the losses may be 5,000 or 6 000 weekly by Christmas

The President says he has got through with the [illegible] business [illegible] now to leave the subject to Congress He refused to say to pardon [illegible]

General News.

NEW YORK Dec 18 —The Fenian Nation is still much excited by the belligerent councils, the old military department having gone off with the Senate O'Mahony is getting up a row for Union Square

Further news from Jamaica says The address to the Maroons which had been issued by the Colonel commanding, refers to the way in which the Sepoy rebels were disposed of, saying they were blown from the mouths of cannon, pounded in their forts and slaughtered like sheep—swept in fact from the face of the earth and he significantly adds that some of the heroes who performed those brilliant deeds are now in Jamaica ready to execute them if necessary

A letter from Buenos Ayres says, the Paraguayans are now marching toward their own borders and concentrating near Itaperadado down on the Parana river below the city of Corrientes They are taking with them large numbers of cattle One division recently drove before it 14,000 head of cattle, and another division had 15,000 ready to pass over into Paraguay

The fortifications of the river bank at Cuyra have been removed by the Allies and now their troops are released from all garrison duty and from all guarding of passes and are concentrating

LIQUIDATION OF THE NATIONAL DEBT —According to the official figures the national indebtedness was reduced to nearly thirteen million dollars in September, or at the rate of one hundred and fifty six millions a year Such an energetic process of liquidation would result in the discharge of all the national pecuniary obligations in about twenty years Rapidly however, as the public debt is diminished the interest charge will of course fall Economy in this important item must lessen materially the national expenses and accelerate the liquidating process Hence it may be safely assumed that before the long six per cents (now having sixteen years to run) shall have matured Government will have paid off all other claims upon it and made adequate provision for the prompt cash redemption of the 1861 bonds on presentation by the holders"—New York Tribune

The Trials of a Rebel Journal —The Memphis Appeal once more issued from the city of its original location, gives the following humorous account of its perilous travels during the war:

The Memphis Appeal and the New Atlanta ... As this journal has ... the city of ... in ... 1862 ... the ... fight ... Mississippi ... On the ... of ... 1862 that plans ... having ... quarters ... with ... the ... of General ... the Appeal retired to Jackson, the capital of Mississippi. Here it continued until the 14th of May 1863, when General Grant and Sherman took it into their heads to occupy and possess that snug little city. They thought they were about to ... the Appeal boys in my ... venture, and their ... with a copy of that morning's issue fresh and ... from the press—but they did not. As they came in one way the Appeal went out the other way, with full forty rounds of shot and shell making a bother over its head before it could get out of the way of those impatient military commanders. The Appeal then, after issuing small extras at Meridian for about a week, cast its lines in the pleasant places of Atlanta, thinking to be out of both Grant's and Sherman's way. But here again, on the 20th of July 1864, the last named gentleman, whom we take to be of a very restless temperament—gave unmistakable indications that he wanted Atlanta likewise, and the Appeal retired to Montgomery, Alabama ... however, to issue extra slips from a ... press until the evacuation. As general ... of ... marched into town ... the proof press and the few cases of type ... out on a dray on the other ... General Sherman and the Appeal parted ... We believe he went off somewhere down in Georgia, and we have since learned that he and his men knocked printing offices into pi at a terrible rate over in South Carolina. The Appeal resumed its regular publication at Montgomery on the 20th of September 1864, and continued to entertain and instruct the ... of ... about the 12th of April 1865, when another fierce gentleman of the Federal military persuasion took it into his head to ride furiously down through Alabama. He gobbled up ... using it very roughly, burning foundries, gin factories and things generally of the C. S. brand of worship. When it was definitely ascertained that this modern Assyrian with his cohorts of seven shooting Spencer riflemen had fixed his venomous eye on Montgomery—that is to say about the 12th of April 1865—the Appeal made room for him by going to Columbus, Georgia. From this time forward the story is briefly told: Montgomery was occupied without resistance and Columbus captured by Major General Wilson, after a stout but ineffectual defense. The materials of the office, with the exception of the press and a few cases that had been forwarded to Macon, were piled in the street and destroyed by the order of Major General Wilson, who exacted of Colonel Dill, one of the proprietors, who was captured with the capture of Columbus, a bond of one hundred thousand dollars not to publish the Appeal during the war, or in default to be held a prisoner. Luckily the war ... soon thereafter, and the Appeal, being now perfectly ironclad with paroles, amnesties and pardons, is on its feet again in robust and vigorous life.

An Indignant Southern Legislature. —A correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial, writing from Jackson, Mississippi, says:

A terrible fire brand was thrown into the lower house a few days since, in the shape of a colored soldier, with his bayonet, to guard a criminal who wished to see one of the members. The soldier stood at a parade rest inside the door, back under the gallery, where he remained quietly until the prisoner had finished his business, when both stepped noiselessly outside the hall. Immediately some half dozen members are on their feet, one crying in the most agonizing tones, "We have been insulted!" another, "It was intended!" while another was for "Preserving the dignity of the House!" Explanation by the unfortunate recipient of the aforesaid prisoner's visit to the effect that the soldier was there "in the simple performance of his duty, and by the request of the prisoner himself" was of no avail. The Speaker declared upon his word of honor and by the high position he occupied, that "This House shall not again suffer such an indignity, particularly from a United States soldier."

Confiscation Impracticable —The most unreasonable of the complaints against President Johnson is that he has interfered with the confiscation of rebel property. In the first place it is not true that he has stopped any legal process of confiscation. He has merely restored property seized and occupied for military purposes. There is no law of war and no other law by which such property can be held, and the General Government cannot be expected to go into robbery as a regular business. There is now a confiscation law in existence and some rebel property has been regularly attached under it. This law can be enforced upon the property of unpardoned rebels if the Government thinks it worth while. But it is not. It will not pay expenses. The Government can give no valid title to such property beyond the life of the present owners, and nobody will pay a price for the property that may pass out of their hands the next month. There is no doubt how the Supreme Court will decide such cases, for the Constitution still exists in that Court. Confiscation is therefore out of the question. —Springfield (Mass) Republican.

John Bright —John Bright writes to C W Alexander of Philadelphia:

You speak of me as the only true friend of America among our public men. In this you are mistaken. You have many friends here, and some of them have done much for your cause during the last four years. I hope from year to year you will have more friends, and that my countrymen may become better acquainted with yours. It is from ignorance of America that so much ill will has arisen. This ignorance is being rapidly dispelled, and I hope the future may see a better feeling in England toward the great English nation on your side of the Atlantic.

Be Relieved —Asthma, that most distressing of all affections of the chest, is certainly and most effectually relieved by a free use of Nowell's Pulmonary Syrup!

Messrs. Smit & Davis of Portland have always on hand a good supply of the genuine Hall's Pulmonary Balsam. No family should be without a bottle of this valuable remedy in the house.

A Neglected Cough, Cold or Sore Throat, which might be checked by a simple remedy like Brown's Bronchial Troches, if allowed to progress may terminate seriously. For Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh and Consumptive Coughs "The Troches" are used with advantage, giving oftentimes immediate relief. Singers and public speakers will find them also excellent to clear the voice, and render articulation wonderfully easy.

To the memory of Miss Alice B. Wilkes, who died Oct. 31st, 1865—aged 25 years

"For her the Heavenly gates were moved
So gently from their portal
The tender watchers scarcely knew
When she became immortal."

An angel stood on the Heavenly shore,
That had left our world but a span before,
And there came from her lips a low refrain
That all her [illegible] spoke of pain

And the voice was heard by a sister sprite
Who wandered below in the starless night
Of a [illegible]
Till she found with the sojourning angel peace

None other the cry of the seraph heard
But she caught with joy the Heavenly word
"Hasten swift! thy rest, thou art kin to us,"
And answering cried, "Lord Jesus, I come!"

As calmly she severed all earthly ties,
Each prayer that she breathed did upward rise,
To form a bright link in the golden chain
That softly was drawing her home again.

By her spirit free was the guerdon caught
As with Heavenly peace and glory fraught
It winged its happy and cloudless way
Back to its God, from the tomb [illegible] clay.

They plucked sweet flowers and wreathed with care
The golden curls of her shining hair
But the angels wove her a brighter crown
As they swiftly came from the ether down

For the amaranth buds were blooming white
Where our darkened eyes beheld but the light
Of the Autumn day in its beauty rest
On the marble brow and the snowy breast

And thus while we mourned on this earthly shore
She crossed the dark river fearlessly o'er,
Then was hushed forever the note of pain,
For the angel had found her mate again.

Portland, November, 1865 — L. P

Professor Agassiz's Expedition.

Profound interest has been excited in scientific and popular circles in this country and in England by the expedition of Professor Agassiz to to Brazil, but in consequence of his aversion to notoriety and of the severe labors in which the scientific corps under his direction has been engaged, no definite account of his movements, so important to science, has been received in this country. In conversation with Rev J. C. Fletcher, who has just returned from South America, we have obtained some interesting particulars of the progress of the expedition, the publication of which we hope is no violation of privacy.

On the 1st of April last Professor Agassiz and his assistants left New York in the Pacific Mail Company's steamer Colorado, and after a pleasant voyage of three weeks reached Rio Janeiro. The Emperor of Brazil (who had been in previous correspondence with Agassiz) no sooner heard of his arrival than he sent a message to him to come to the palace of St. Christopher, where the Professor was received with the warmth of an old friend, the Emperor welcoming him in person with great cordiality, and placing at his disposal every facility for advancing his important mission.

On the 25th of April, when the solar eclipse took place, Agassiz, at the Emperor's invitation, spent the day with him the observatory of the palace. The conversations of that day caused the Professor to remark that all the previous accounts of the accurate and really abstruse scientific acquirements of the Emperor were entirely confirmed; and he was heard to say that, while it had been his fortune to see many of the monarchs of Europe, the Emperor of Brazil is the first for whom he has felt respect for his attainments and character as transcending official position. It was not, however, in the scientific point of view alone that Agassiz's admiration was excited, but it was to find in the Emperor the most accurate knowledge of our current literature, and a high moral tone when speaking on such a subject as slavery—a subject in regard to which the Emperor by his deeds and his expressions, has left no uncertain sound.

Nor was it only in the imperial circles that Agassiz found warm and cordial greeting. Every public journal hailed his coming; his rooms were besieged with Brazilian noblemen, senators, deputies and other citizens, offering their services. His laboratory (where he and his assistants were engaged in putting up for the great museum at Cambridge the innumerable specimens that flowed in from all sides) was also the scene of many visitors, who did not interrupt the important work in hand.

Professor Agassiz was not unknown in Brazil, for it is an interesting fact that before he was of age, Spix, the companion of Von Martius to South America, in 1817-20 having died, Von Martius could find no one in Europe, with the exception of Agassiz, to classify the large collection of Brazilian fishes. The volume in question was the earliest work of Agassiz, and is to-day a standard on the subject.

Many courtesies from foreigners as well as Brazilians were extended to Agassiz and his wife—the latter specially receiving marked and gratifying attentions. The Swiss residents of Rio Janeiro, on the occasion of the Professor's fifty ninth birthday, gave him a festival, which is described by Mr. Fletcher as having been most enthusiastic. The intertwined flags, shields of Switzerland and America, and the sympathetic speeches of the Swiss, showed that their sympathy had been with our Government during the war. Longfellow's poem to Agassiz, on his fiftieth birthday, was read, and produced profound emotion.

These [illegible] attentions, however, did not hinder the great purposes for which the expedition went to Brazil. We have already referred to the vast collection of specimens, many of them new to science. Agassiz had not been a fortnight in the country before he discovered what he confidently predicted before he left the United States; namely, evidence that in some remote period the glaciers, the great ice rivers and moving plains, had flowed over the present home of the most tropical nation in the world. In those palm-covered mountains around Rio de Janeiro he found erratic boulders and deposits of glaciers as in Switzerland, Norway and Sweden. His last great opponent, Sir Roderick Murchison, has already acknowledged in public that Agassiz was right in his predictions and investigations of glaciers in Great Britain; and geologists, both native and foreign now in Brazil, have recognized that Agassiz is correct in regard to the tropics, though they had failed, as well as St. Hillaire, Dr. Gardiner and other naturalists, to observe striking facts until the investigation of the Swiss glaciers pointed out within the tropic of Capricorn unmistakably evidences of the great snow storm which once covered the globe.

Numerous minor discoveries of great importance to scientific men have been made, but the accounts of these will be published in time by Agassiz himself. They will give a clear idea of the vast mineral riches and other resources of Brazil. Perhaps the most important fact, in a commercial point of view, is his confirmation of the existence in Brazil of coal of the true carboniferous era. Brazil has hitherto received all her coal, at great expense, from England; but a few years ago, Mr Nathaniel Plant, an English geologist, found on the southwestern border of Riogrande do Sul, vast quantities of coal, which has been pronounced by Agassiz, from the fossils which the coal contains to be of the most valuable quality, destined to add immensely to the riches of the country.

The expedition, in June and July, divided into several parties, two of which are exploring in the interior, while the one under the immediate supervision of Professor Agassiz is now exploring the Amazon and its branches in a steamer placed at the Professor's disposal by the Emperor.

A Dark Place.—According to the State Teachers' Association of Tennessee which has just issued an address on the necessity of improving the common school system, there are eighty three thousand adults in that state who can neither read nor write, and three hundred thousand children for whose education there are no adequate facilities. This is a lamentable exhibit, to which no free State can furnish a parallel.

The present white population of Tennessee is about 810,000; so that one person in ten is absolutely illiterate. When to these are added the thousands of blacks just released from slavery, whom the masters kept in ignorance, the aggregate shows that a broad missionary field is open in this single State of the South. We don't wonder that the assembled teachers of the State, discussing educational topics with enlightened zeal but naturally despairing of success with the limited means afforded them, earnestly urge the people to consent to a taxation of a million dollars a year to place the schools upon a proper footing. Nor is it a matter for surprise to know that a considerable proportion of the eighty three thousand grown persons in Tennessee who can neither read nor write found congenial employment in the ranks of the rebel armies. It was of such men, prejudiced and easily led, that the Davises and Yanceys made tools.

One of the earliest duties to engage the attention of the Southern Legislature, under the new order of affairs should be the elevation of the masses of the people from the debasement which comes of ignorance, and the surest method of effecting this reform is to place the common school in every hamlet, so that education may become as free in every Southern State as in the North.—N. Y. Evening Post.

An Angry Letter from a Foolish Virginian

[From the New York Evening Post.]

Edward A. Pollard during the war one of the editors of the Richmond Examiner, and the author of a history of the war writes a letter to the New York Daily News, of course—in which he endeavors by bitter words, to stir up ill feelings in the splenetic and ugly Southern men and to blow up anew the fires of sectional hostility.

It is creditable to the Southern people that since the close of the war but very few such wrong headed and mischievous persons as this Pollard have found a public hearing amongst them and in every case we have noticed, as in this case these mischief makers have belonged to the class stigmatized by the Southern people with the nickname of "bomb proofs"—men who kept out of the army during the war on various pretences.

General Jeff Thompson who fought against us like a man during the war, and when fighting ceased submitted like a honorable man and became a peaceable citizen, said "The only persons in the South who wish to do any more fighting are those who didn't do any when they had a chance." Thus we find George Sanders who kept himself during the war out of harm's way in Canada, writing but the other day "I am one of those who adhered to the Southern Confederacy, and I do not mean to abandon it." Thus too, we find Pollard, who sat comfortably in Richmond while the fighting was going on, sneering at General Lee and other soldiers of the Southern army, for submitting, like right minded men, when the fortunes of war had gone against them.

A Richmond paper assured the Northern people some weeks ago that the only people in the South who even think of the new quarrels new sectional disputes new wars, are these "bomb proofs" who by bribery or social or political influence, secured their own exemption from conscription and lived at home at ease, far from the sound of battle. Pollard unwillingly speaks to the same effect. Of course he puts it in a manner intentionally as insulting and irritating to the Southern people as his bitter spirit can make it.

"Never has history afforded an example of a people who, after the ardors and exasperations of a war so long, so fierce, and so bloody, have fallen to such depths of submission, to such attitudes of humiliation, as those now exhibited by the people of the South. Indeed the prompt alacrity of their submission and its abject air do but little to credit history to the countrymen of Lee and Jackson. The South has shown but little dignity in misfortune, and but few of her sons wrung from adversity the tribute which it gives to honor. In wars of rebellion which have been disastrous, it is no uncommon thing for men to slip out from the masses, willing and ready to accept the penalties of failure, and prompt to claim for themselves the honors of martyrdom. But it is most remarkable that the close of a war which was once thought to exhibit so much devotion has found so few persons among the prominent men of the South willing to brave misfortune or to make any sacrifice in their own persons to the truth and honor of a cause lost in the cast of events.

"There is a hopeful future for the South, but it is not to be found in the counsels of those time servers and submissionists who are for yielding unconditional obedience to every behest of a political party in power, and are anxious that those in authority may spit upon them that they may give evidence of their docility. The South has nothing to expect from its timid and mercenary press. It has nothing of good to expect from misrepresentatives of Congress, who claim as a decisive qualification, and a peculiar merit, that they can swear that in a war which invaded the homes of the South they were the heartless creatures who stood mute and neutral in the grand tragedy that ran with blood and tears. * * * Nothing is to be gained by the people of the South regarding themselves as ticket-of-leave men or any other kind of probationary vagabonds; such behavior invites insult and oppression. Of base and unscrupulous enemies we make demands, we do not flatter the vanity of braggarts, and offer to insure the insolence of cowards by approaching them with entreaties."

Compare this with the letter of Regan, of Texas or with the utterances of other prominent Southern men which have appeared from time to time in our columns, and its insane folly will become only the more conspicuous by the contrast. But why did Pollard address his letter not to any journal in Virginia, but to a New York paper? Is he looking for the countenance and sympathy here in the Northern States which he apparently did not find in the South? We trust his attempt to excite ill-feeling amongst the Southern people, embarrass the President's efforts at reorganization, and put back the day of peace and prosperity for the South, will be exposed and condemned as it ought to be by the Southern press. The South can have no more mischievous or damaging counsel for their interests than that of such men as Pollard and Sanders.

"The absence of those usual exhibitions of martyrdom on the close of the civil war or rebellion is a subject of painful remark to those who value the reputation of the South in history. The ex-President of the Confederate States endures a vicarious punishment which he would have been glad to escape, but what other leader of the so-called 'rebellion' is there within the Federal jurisdiction—from Vice President Stephens down—who is not an applicant for pardon at Washington? There the Federal authorities, with their usual ingenuity, have prepared a perpetual feast of Constitutional humiliation in the throngs which fill the passages and stair-cases to the President's door to entreat pardon, to be sneered at by a critical crowd of Yankees as unclean beasts. Even General Lee, in whose name and character every Southern man holds a stake, has risked his reputation in history by asking a pardon for services which he declared, in his farewell address to the Confederate army, were rendered in the cause of truth, and entitled to the gratitude of their peculiar country."

Pollard of course, thinks it all wrong for the Southern States to send men to Congress who are eligible to seats there. He would send only those who are ineligible, he would produce a dead lock, he would have the Southern States kept under military rule, he would put off indefinitely the restoration of civil law, the resumption of industry. And he does not hesitate to stigmatize as "mercenary" and "timid" those who advise a contrary policy—among whom are, without exception, so far as we know, all the Virginians who took a prominent part in the fighting. He writes this mixture of misrepresentation and vilification, which is after the style of the late Yancey's efforts while engaged in "firing the Southern heart."

A Lesson from Alabama.—We publish elsewhere an argument from Judge Patten, of Alabama, a reconstructed rebel, who is now running for Governor of that State, in favor of the voting basis of representation in the legislative and congressional councils, as against the basis of the entire population. Judge Patton contends that the recent convention in Alabama took the proper course in declaring that representatives in the Legislature and in Congress should be apportioned according to the white voters and black men voters added together. It appears that the convention, while availing themselves of the old rule so far as relates to the number of representatives in Congress, nevertheless apportioned them in districts in such manner that an absolute equality of white voters in the several districts should be maintained. That is, by the virtue of the existing rule Alabama is entitled to six representatives in Congress, and will soon be entitled to eight, while upon the voting basis she would be entitled to only four; but in dividing the State into six districts, she has ignored the black population entirely, and has given one representative to every 70,000 white citizens. The justice of this principle is earnestly contended for by Judge Patten. Are 25,000 voters in the Southern counties equal to 100,000 voters among the hills of the North? Is one man in Mobile the equal of four men in Huntsville? Of course not.

We contend that the same rule which Alabama applies to her own citizens the United States should apply to all citizens. If one man in South Alabama is not the equal of two men in North Alabama, neither is one man in Alabama equal to two men in Illinois. Slavery having been destroyed, let all its compromises and consequences go to the dogs with it. The apportionment of representatives in Congress and electors of President and Vice President upon the basis of persons instead of voters, was one of the compromises of slavery. It is no more applicable to a condition of freedom than a fugitive slave law or a human auction block. If the ex-rebels, reinforced by the Copperhead party of the North, and encouraged by President Johnson, refuse to allow the loyal blacks to vote, then we say they shall not steal the votes of these loyal blacks to weigh down thirty three congressional districts of the North. Mr. Lincoln declared in 1854 that if he had no other objection to the repeal of the Missouri compromise, which it was proposed to allow slavery to go into Kansas and Nebraska, it would be a sufficient objection to him that it proposed to extend the principle of inequality in national representation to new territory. "If," said Mr. Lincoln in his Peoria speech "it be really a 'sacred right of self government' to the man who shall go to Nebraska, to decide whether he will be the equal of me or the double of me, then after he shall have exercised that right and thereby shall have reduced me to a still smaller fraction of a man than I already am, I should like for some gentleman, deeply skilled in the mysteries of sacred rights to provide himself with a microscope and find out if he can what has become of my sacred rights. They will surely be too small for detection with the naked eye."—Chicago Tribune.

THE STANDARD AMERICAN BILLIARD TABLES!

AND COMBINATION CUSHIONS

MESSRS. PHELAN & COLLENDER

WOULD RESPECTFULLY CALL THE ATTENTION of persons wanting Billiard Tables to the great superiority of the above tables manufactured by them at their establishment.

At the Billiard Congress of 1863, composed of all the first class players of America, it was unanimously resolved that tables of our manufacture should be used at all matches for the Championship, as the best and only [illegible] tables.

These Billiard Tables have received the unqualified approval of the best players and most competent judges who have universally pronounced them unequalled for general excellence and durability.

Seven distinct patents for improvements in Billiard Tables have been granted to us by the United States Patent Office, and we have lately obtained a Patent from the French Government, for our Improvement in Billiard Cushions.

We employ in the construction of our tables, a variety of machines specially made for the purpose, by means of which we are enabled to insure a scientific and mechanical accuracy hitherto unknown in Billiard manufacture.

Having a long experience and thorough knowledge of all the appliances of billiards and constantly on hand a large stock of the best and most thoroughly seasoned lumber, we are prepared to furnish everything required in the Billiard line with promptness and dispatch.

The eminent French Billiard Player, M. Berger has published the following opinion:

"New York, 20 August 1861.

"On the eve of leaving the United States I am happy to declare to all amateurs of Billiards that after a tour of eleven months through the principal cities, I have been enabled to judge in a satisfactory manner of the superiority of the Billiard Tables manufactured by Phelan & Collender. The system of manufacturing is so superior that I am happy to introduce their style of cushion into France. They have united to their manufacture of American Billiard Tables that of the French Tables, of remarkable excellence and beauty. For these reasons I am happy to make this declaration.

"BERGER, CLAUDIUS,
Prof. of Billiards, Paris."

Parties ordering from us will find our prices as low as good work can possibly be made for. We sell first class articles at a fair price and will not make an inferior article at any price.

Orders by mail carefully and promptly executed. Illustrated Catalogues and Price Lists sent by mail. The "Billiard Cue," a journal published in the interest of Billiards, and containing details of all novelties, a complete record of Billiard news and everything of interest to amateurs of Billiards, sent free on application.

M. E. HUGHES, 730 Montgomery St. San Francisco Cal., is our only authorized Agent on the Pacific coast, to whom all orders should be addressed.

WILCOX & GIBBS SEWING MACHINE.

We would call attention to the following facts in connection with this Machine, which renders it superior to any other in use:

It forms a flat elastic seam which will not rip in wear;
It is entirely noiseless;
A patented device prevents its being turned backward;
The needle cannot be set wrong;
Can be used successfully without other instructions than accompany the Machine;
It received the Gold Medal of the American Institute in 1863.

ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM!

The Remedy for Curing

CONSUMPTION, COUGHS, COLDS, Asthma, Croup,

Diseases of the Throat, Bronchitis, Pains and Oppression of the Chest and Lungs, Difficult Breathing and all the Diseases of the Pulmonary Organs.

ITS ACTION IS EXPECTORANT, ALTERATIVE, SUDORIFIC, SEDATIVE, DIAPHORETIC AND DIURETIC, which renders it one of the most valuable remedies known for curing diseases of the lungs. It excites expectoration, and causes the lungs to throw off the phlegm or mucus; CHANGES THE SECRETIONS AND PURIFIES THE BLOOD; heals the irritated parts; gives strength to the digestive organs; brings the liver to its proper action, and imparts strength to the whole system. Such is the immediate and satisfactory effect, that it is WARRANTED TO BREAK UP THE MOST DISTRESSING COUGH IN A FEW HOURS' TIME, if not of too long standing. IT IS WARRANTED to give entire satisfaction even in the MOST CONFIRMED CASES OF CONSUMPTION! IT IS WARRANTED NOT to produce costiveness (which is the case with most remedies) or affect the head, as it contains no Opium in any form. IT IS WARRANTED TO BE PERFECTLY HARMLESS to the most delicate child, although it is an active and powerful remedy for restoring the system. THERE IS NO REAL NECESSITY FOR SO MANY DEATHS BY CONSUMPTION, when ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM will prevent it if only taken in time.

Sold by all Druggists. Price $1 per bottle.
